US cannot close PLO's UN office, rules judge

NO 7288

NEW YORK, June 29, (AP): A federal judge ruled today that the US government cannot close the PLO's observer mission to the United Nations.

US judge Edmund Palmieri found that the Anti-terrorism Aet passed by Congress does not supersede US obligations to its 1947 headquarters agreement with the UN.

"The language of the headquarters agreement, the longstanding practice under it. and the interpretation given it by the parties to it, leave no doubt that it places an ohligation upon the United States to refrain from impairing the function of the PLO observer mission," Palmieri wrote in a 37-page opinion.

He noted that the language and legislative bistory of the Anti-terrorism Act, which branded the PLOa terrorist group, do not indicate Congress meant to ahandon the country's obligations under the headquarters

"We are therefore constrained to interpret the Anti-terrorism Act as failing to supersede the headquarters agreement and inapplicable to the mission," Palmieri wrote.

JEDDAH, June 29, (AP): Saudi Arabia, in a stern warning aimed at Iran's militant Shiite Muslim supporters has said Muslims face Quranic punishments, which include beheading, and crucifizion, if they cause trouble during this year's pilgrimage to Makknh.

Convicted criminals are publicly beheaded in the theocratic kingdom, where the law is based on the Islamie sharia code. But there has been no crucifixion for many years. The Saudi warning was con-

Warning

It was the Saudis' harshest warning yet that it will not tolerate trouble during the haj or pilgrimage, to Islam's holiest shrines and was elearly aimed at Iran and the Shiite followers of Ayatollah Khomeini from other Muslim countries.

But Iranian leaders have said they will boycott this year's haj and have called on Muslims from other countries to stage protests during the pilgrimage.

New government formed in France

Socialist French Prime Minister Michel Rocard took on the leadership of a new minority government last oight and named a cabioet which, while reducing socialist influence, attracted only a handful of centrists.

Rocard had promised a major opening up to the political centre in his second cabioet, after inconclusive general elections on June 12 left the Socialists 13 seats short of a majority in the 577-seat National Assembly.

Rocard, who was asked by President François Mitterrand to form a new government a week ago, must rely on either centrist or communist votes to push through legislation.

But the new 49-member government included only three centrists and left the major portfolios in Socialist hands.

In purely quantitative terms, the left's hold on the cahinet was weakened. Card-carrying Socialnon-Socialists each won 24

But the broadening of the political scene, the stated aim of both Mitterrand and Rocard, appeared to benefit non-political public personalities and technocrats rather than the centre.

Exceptions included centrist leader Jean-Pierre Soisson, who served in the government of former centre-right President Valery Giscard D'Estaing and is close to former Prime Minister Raymond Barre.

Soisson, who resigned from Giscard's party immediately after his nomination, was given the portfolio of labour, employment and training.

The other two centrist to join the new government were Jean-Marie Rausch, as new foreign trade minister, and Helene Dorlhac, appointed secretary of state for family affairs.

Rocard also brought in some popular French personalities.

WASHINGTON, June 29, (AP): Foreign-born residents of the United States appear healthier than native-born Americans, spending less timesick in bed or the hospital and visiting doctors less, a US government survey says.

Some 22.8 per cent of nativeborn Americans age 18 and over reported four or more days in the previous year when they were sick in bed or at least a half-day.

By comparision, only 18.8 per cent of the foreign-horn population said they had been sick four or more days in a year, according to the study, "Health of the Foreign-Born Population: United States, 1985-86."

Several possible reasons could account for the difference, said Dr Gerry Hendershot of the National Centre for Health Statistics, who prepared the report.

One factor that certainly is involved is the selectivity of immigration to this country," Hendershut said.

Good health

People with higher educations and professional skills have a better opportunity to migrate to this country, so people coming here tend to be from groups that have good health," he said.

And, he said, "immigrants tend to be younger, on average, than the general population, and younger people in general tend to be healthier than older people

Hendershot noted that the Immigration and Naturalization Service does some health screening for applicants for US residency.

Finally, he pointed out the study was based on interviews with 58,682 households.

Greek leftists claim killing of US officer ATHENS, June 29, 1AP): The just 100 metres from his home in

Greek terrorist organisation November 17 today claimed responsibility for a car-bomb hlast that killed the US naval attache to Greece.

In a five-page statement published in the left-wing Athens afternoon daily Ethnos, the organisation said it would stage more attacks against Americans "until the last Turkish soldier leaves Cyprus and the last American soldier leaves our country.'

Threat

Many Greeks blame the United States for failing to prevent Turkey's 1974 invasion of Cyprus after an Athens-inspired coup there.

Around 30,000 Turkish troops are stationed in the northern third of the eastern Mediterranean island, divided into Northern Turkish Cypriot and Southern Greek Cypriot sectors. US Navy Capt, William Nor-deen, 51, died Tuesday when a booby-trapped car blew up oext to his armour-plated automobile. Kifissia, a northern Athens suburh. The blast ripped off the car's roof and flung Nordcen's decapitated body into the front yard of an unoccupied house. The November 17 statement described the 3,500-strong American military presence in Greece as "a force of occupation" and said "we will strike against anyone of its members or agent of its secret services."

Police said the statement appeared to be genuine. Nordeen and his British wife, Patricia, were due to leave next month after completing a threeyear term at the US embassy in Athens.

Premier Andreas Papandreou said "he was deeply grieved", over the killing and pledged to fight terrorism.

BEIJING, June 29, (AP): China has drawn up regulations for marriages between Chinese and Taiwanese citizens, while saying it will discourage marriages with Tatwanese who intend to stay only temporarily in China.

The Ministry of Civil Affairs has ruled that people from Taiwan who have settled down on the mainland may marry mainland citizens after producing certificates on their marriage status from their work unit or neighbourbood committee, the official Xinhua news agency reported

The Taiwan partner must also produce certificates to show before coming to the mainland. If the person does not have such certificates, he or she can suhmit a self-written statement on not having a spouse, which must be certified by authorities where the person currently lives.

Union Carbide says there is "no political will" in the Indian government to settle the case and its lawyers have started dealing directly with attorneys who have filed suit in the United States on behalf of gas claimants. Nearly 150,000 claimants are

Agreements on unity plans signed

Libya, Algeria to vote on union

BEIRUT. June 29, (Reuter): Plans for unity between Libya and Algeria are to be presented to millions of people in the two North African states, the official Libyan news Agency JANA reported today.

JANA, monitored in Beirut, said agreements on unity plans and economic, industrial and cultural links were signed by Major Abdel-Salam Jalloud. second-in-command to Libyan leader Muammar Khaddafi, and Algerian officials.

'lt was decided the draft project for unity between the hrntherly countries will be presented to the public masses in both Algeria and Libya in September." the agency said.

Activity If the pact is approved it would allnw people to use identity cards instead of passports when crossing horders between the two cnuntries, border observation posts would be unified and import and export taxes abolished, JANA said.

"A joint committee was set up to implement this within two months," it added.
It said Jalloud led a high-level

Libyan delegation which arrived in Algiers on Monday to discuss boosting links between the two countries. He returned to Libya on Tuesday.

The visit coincided with intense activity among North African states whose leaders discussed plans for a regional grouping at a Maghreb summit in Algiers on June 10.

A hrief communique issued at the end of the summit spoke of greater unity between Lihya, Algeria, Tunisia, Mauritania and Morocco.

Lihya advocates creating a united regional grouping but the others prefer to think in terms of economic links similar to those of the European Economic Community. The two countries also set up eight joint companies for the production of oil, cars, engines and construction equipment, JANA said.

They agreed on the general framework of economic co-operation, set up a joint bank called the Arab Maghreb Bank for Investment and Commerce and a company to produce petrochemicals, it added.

The idea of union between states is a cherished one of Khaddafi, who in the past has tried unsuccessfully to forge a series of mergers as part of his vision of cementing Arab unity.

The Libyan leader made a vain attempt to court Algeria into union last year after a two-year unity pact with another North African country, Morocco, collapsed in 1986.

A 1974 union between Libya and neighbouring Tunisia was short-lived. Khaddafi has also signed now-defunct mergers with Egypt and Sudan.

The communique hailed the five-nation North African summit in Algiers on June 10 attended by Lihya, Algeria, Tunisia, Morocco and Mauritania.

The summit, long-sought hut hlocked hy hitter regional conflicts, followed the renewal of diplomatic relations between Algeria and Morocco in May after a 12-year hreak caused hy the Western Sahara war.

Libya and Tunisia had renewed ties in December after a break of more than two years. Libyan-Moroccan accord, broken off two years ago by King Hassan, had deprived Algeria of Khaddafi's material support in the Western Sahara conflict, where Algiers-supported Polisario guerrillas continue to fight for the independence of the territory from Morocco. The communique was issued after talks between Algerian President Chadli Benjedid and Jalloud, who was accompanied by a high-level delegation including the Lihyan equivalent of prime minister, the secretary-general of the General People's Committee, Omar Al Muntas-

Turkey complains against Armenian resolutions

"Situated in one of the most critical regions of the world, Turkey shares the longest border with the Soviet Union, guards the strategic Turkish Straits and maintains the largest NATO Army after the US," he said.

Even though Turkey bas the lowest income of the NATO countries, its defence spending puts it among the top four nations in the 16-member alliance, Evren said. He also appealed for the removal of US trade barriers to Turkish exports of textiles, apparel and steel, which he said would compete with other foreign products rather than US domestic goods.

Evren said he preferred "less aid, more trade" as a way of enabling Turkey to obtain more income to pay for its military modernisation.

Thought for today

I BELIEVE in the discipline of silence and can talk for hours about It - George Bernard Shaw, Irish-born playwright (1856-1950).

Arabs are proud of Iraqi victories

FOR the first time, the Iraqi President has said that Iraq has made such a decisive impact on the Gulf war that it can be considered effectively over and the conflict will

President Saddam Hussein, while honouring Iraqi fighters, departed from his normal visualising of the war scenario as one which would go on until both sides declare their desire to end it peacefully and honourably through negotiations.

His statement means that be and bis Army have imposed peace which the whole world could not. This, much sought after peace, had evaded the efforts of the entire world to Iran's failure in accepting all mediation efforts, international resolutions and calls for brotherbood, friendship and appeals to stop bloodshed.

Realising the true stubborn and arrogant mentality of the fanatical Iranian leadership, Saddam, during the past eight years refrained from predicting any date for an end to the war. He patiently prepared his country and the Army for a prolonged war and stressed in all his press interviews and political meetings that the end of the war would come about only when the Iranian regime was ready to sit at the negotiation table and accept conditions for peace. Without this, the Iraqi President saw no end to

It now appears that the President has reached the stage of achieving his goals and objectives when he announced that the war will be over by the end of this year.

Obviously Saddam's prediction of the end of the war are not based on weak premises. The President knows what he says and means exactly what he says. Having personally led his men into many major battles, his vision for setting a date to the end of the war is based on first hand information. The major defeats that Iran has suffered in the recent past will be crowned when the Iranian people remove the regime that is continually leading them to their destruction and death. Though this regime is led by a man on the verge of death it still seeks more death and the spilling of blood in an exercise in

The Iranian internal front is unlike that of a few years or even a few months ago. The defeats of the Iranian Army have led to uncovering the many mistakes, misdeeds and misinterpreted ideologies of the Iranian. regime. Under these obvious constraints, it will not be possible for men eloquent only in speeches — like Rafsanjani - to lead Iran to any form of victory. Rafsanjani will find that the sound of rifles is different from that of microphones.

Saddam Hussein is to be highly commended for achieving what the whole world was striving for - peace and the implementation of the UN Security Council resolutions. More so, Saddam has restored to Arahs their pride and true heritage. All Arabs who followed the events of the war are certainly proud of Iraq's victories. These victories will go down not only in the history of Iraq, but in the annals of the entire Arab world. All Arabs join Saddam, his Army, his people and the country in their victory celebrations.

With the end of the war, however, we the Arab people will be the most to regret the forthcoming events in Iran when the Iranian people will seek retribution and revenge from the leaders who pushed four million of the best Iranian youths to their untimely deaths in the senseless war. We pray for Allah's mercy upon them - for it is not mistakes of these victims. It was rather, the mistake of those who aspired to build up their own glory over the bodies of their compatriots.

SFARAY, Lebanon, (Reuter): Children, whose constant companion is fear, play in rose gar-dens bordered by laod-mines in a fragile sanctuary on the frontline of Lebanoo's wars.

. Japanese economic assistance and co-operation with the Arab countries amounted to $267 million in 1986, compared to $0.34 million with Israel in the same year, that is 785 times larger.

In Israel, which he visited only after visiting three Arah countries, Mr Uno had not only met Israeli leaders hut also visited the occupied territories and met six eminent Palestinian people. In conclusion, let me recall that Japan's Middle Eastern policy is based on three essential principles. They are: (1) withdrawal of Israeli armed forces from all the Arab territories occupied since the 1967 war, (2) recognition of the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people including the right to establish an independent state, and (3) recognition of Israeli right of existence. Needless to say, these principles have been stressed hy

40 years after break with Moscow

By Ivan Stefanovic

BELGRADE, (UPI): Yugoslavia this week passes the 40th anniversary of its expulsion from the Soviet bloc and subsequent decision to seek an alternate path

Yet state-run media have kept silent on the anniversary on Tuesday and no official celebration is planned, primarily because of economic and political problems gripping the nation.

in addition, the government doesn't want to embarrass Moscow following Mikhail Gorbachev's March visit that showed Yugoslav-Soviet relations at a new level of cordiality.

inflation Grappling with a bost of hurgeoning economic, social and political problems, Yugoslavia with 23 million people would have preferred that the anniversary fall in better times.

dismissed by the Kremlin as herenc revisionism.

Now, some of the consumer goods are still available, albeit at much higher prices, but there is also a 170-per cent inflation, the highest in Europe, rising unemployment and stagoating production and productivity, compounded by a $21-billion foreign debt.

Josip Broz Tito, the founder of modern Yugoslavia, ruled the country for 35 years until his death in May 1980.

Under Tito, the strategically located Balkan country broke away from the Soviet orbit and became a founding member of the Non-aligned Movement.

The Soviet Union helped liberate the country from Nazi German occupiers and assisted Tito to power, but maintained its influence over him for less than three years after the end of World

By the spring of 1948, Tito's rift with Josef Stalin over taking orders from Moscow under the Kremlin policy of dictating to all communist nations erupted into the open.

On June 28, 1948, the Informbureau, a Soviet-dominated grouping of all communist nations and parties, at a meeting held in Bucbarest, Romania unanimously voted to expel Yugoslavia from the organisation for alleged revisionism and 'deserting the principles of Marxism-Leninism.

The move signified Yugoslavia's excommunication from the Soviet bloc.

Boycott

Moscow and its allies immediately imposed a trade boycott that hit Yugoslavia particularly hard, as more than 80 per cent of its foreign trade had until then been conducted with its ideological allies.

To offset the consequences, Tito accepted economic aid and military equipment from the United States, and received aid in foreign trade also from France and Great Britain.

Since then things have changed fast, but not for the better. Now, largely because of indiscriminate borrowing and mismanaged economic investments, Yugoslavia is going through its worst economic crisis since the wartime privations. While Tito is still revered as the war hero and the man who defied Stalin 40 years ago, any admiration for his postwar economic achievement is fadiog fast.

Yugoslavia's experiment in self-management of state enterprises, developed after Tito's break with Moscow, has been less than a success.

There is mounting criticism of Tito's 1974 constitution, which is about to be revised because the system of annually rotating top government posts among leaders of various ethnic groups has proved unworkable.

BANGKOK, (Reuter): Thailand is being hit by a series of strikes and labour rallies that politicians and analysts see as a threat to Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda in the run-up to general elections on July 24. Prem, who has not run for a parliamentary seat since taking office as compromise prime minister in 1980, is seen by political analysts as one of the targets of strikes and work slowdown in various state-run enterprises. As Bangkok's busy port

The Securities Exchange of Thailand index dropped nine points, or two percent, on Friday and Monday as investors unloaded shares on fears the unrest would erupt into an allout general strike.

Fishing contest deemed cruel

HAMM, West Germany, (API: A West German court has fined two organisers of a fishing contest 1,200 marks (714 dollars) each for cruelty to animals after ruling that fish feel pain when hooked and pulled from the water.

The unusual decision grew out of a suit filed by an animal rights group against a local angling club that staged a fishing contesi iwo years ago. The object of the contest was to see which fisherman could catch the most pounds of fish in two-days. After the fish were pulled in and weighed, they were returned to the water. Civil court judge Horst Brinkmann based his decision on testimony of experts called in to determine whether or not fish feel pain when hooked, and if they suffered during the time they were out of the water. Four wildlife experts testified that an increased heart-and laboured breathing of the fish after they were pulled from the water indicated that fish feel pain. Brinkmann ruled that fishing was permissible if fish were quickly killed, and if they were caught for useful purposes. But the judge said that simply catching the fish to weigh and determine which angler was more skilled subjected the creatures to unusually cruel treatment. 'Fishiog cootests serve no further purpose than to determine who has won," Brinkmann ruled.

IVE tried dieting, and I've. tried love and I've learned one thing in the process: The two don't mix. If you came to my apartment, you could guess my marital status by just pecking in the refrigerator.

On an average day, my sister's "married" fridge contains a bakery window's worth of cakes, enough fruit juice to float a tank, half a pizza, beer, hagels, waffles, yogurt, ice pops, foil-wrapped leftovers, cieven-vear-old nephew's school science experiment.

In contrast, my temptationfree refrigerator stores ketchup from 1981, diet margarine, "lite" cheese, cantaloupe, one head of brownish lettuce, a case of diet soda, ice cubes, and something close to seventy-five duck-sauce packets from Chinese take-out restauraot.

Unappetizing as the contents of my refrigerator may be, the absence of tasty snacks makes it easier to count calories. I eat my meals in the reverse order, starting with low-calorie chocolate pudding, followed hy salad and, two hours later, by a frozen diet TV dinner.

For another thing, a lover is no guarantee of moral support.

I lived several months without one of those weird people who can eat what they want, when they want - without gaining a

I became frustrated by our semi-married refrigerator. Finally, I begged my inamorata to buy only desserts I hated, like low-calorie prune sherbet, one of only two things that doesn't look appetizing to me wen I'm hungry - the other being my dog's rawhide beef chews. She laughed. The relationship ended not long afterward.

Now, I try to look at the brighter side of being single even when my willpower evaporates altogether. After all food can be a better companion than a human being: Sicilian pizza doesn't care whether you respect it in the morning, French toast won't leave the cap off the tooth paste tube, and Heavenly Hash ice cream doesn't come with a mother-in-law.

CINE ROUND-UP FROM BOMBAY

Firoze Rangoonwalla.

IN the death of Raj Kapoor, India's film world lost one of its most genuine talents. Such a multi-faced talent is born just once in half a century. Various forms of tributes were paid to him including hiographical documentaries. TV productions and a couple of books.

But these have all failed to probe the mystique behind the actor, film maker, showman, pet of the film world and the eternal lover that he was known as. There were many aspects to this man which are little-known and require to be probed in order to uoderstand the psyche of a creative artist in the film medium. In fact there was also a complete other side to the "lovable man" (as he was known to the outside world.)

His personal life itself could be a topic of much discussioo on grounds of ethics the normal humao criteria which film celehrities ignore with audacity. Of course, Raj was largely a simple and modest mao, devoted to his work and his studio. But theo he olso drank heavily, lost his sense of balance, treated people gruffly and kept up his weakness for women. He also stuck to the commercialism of Bombay's cinema and suppressed his dreams of making unusual films. In his early life he was too husy and io his later life too weak and addicted to do what

That is why Raj was haunted hy maoy memories. He could not forget his youth, his success as a haodsome hero, his early films which were sensible as well as successful. Above all, he could not forget Nargis, his main inspiration in the youthful days, who was the life force of his films and a pillar of the R. K. Studio which he constructed when "Awara" was beiog shot, But then, Raj was also accused of exploiting women and exposing the female anatomy in his films. After the parting with Nargis came Padmioi and then Vviavantimala who grew very close to him. Since then, his films became more vulgar and showy. He often gave up direct tion of many films and entries ted it to others. His family life was stormy. Why?

There is a lot of "why" and how" about Raj which cinephiles will keep wonderiog over. The two documentaries made on him before his death doo't probe ioto such intimate problems or into his growth and decline as an artist. They merely scrape the surface of his films and show him more as a song and dance master. Simi's one-hour movie made for BBC tries to dig his relation with Nargis, while skipping the case of Vyjayanı imala (nowa Mem-her of Parliameot). While speaking on Nargis, too, Raj does not exactly emerge with flying colours. He simplifies the whole issue by saying: "My wife is not my actress and my actress is not my wife."

When asked why he never married Nargis, he makes it worse hy explaining: "My actress is my heroine, she cannot be the mother of my children like my wife." People may then well ask why a director and hero keeps such intimate levels with heroines, that some of them nearly escape becoming mothers of his children. It is the velocity of love and lihido that fuels the making of excellent films. But theo the consequences of such love should not be The real Raj Kapoor faced hy the womao alone. Here again Raj passes the buck hy sayiog: "The actresses see oo the screen what I have done with them. It is oot me they love hut themselves. So nobody is cheated" ...

The film by Siddharth Kak avoids such issues, being a production of the government body Films Divisioo. Both films carry the story of how Raj had first met Nargis and then transcribed the same scene in "Bohby" with Rishi and Dim-ple. It is refreshing until you realise it's a publicity gimmick. This is confirmed by another stuot Simi tries to pull off which falls flat. It says that when Raj wanted Vyjayantimala for "Sangham", he sent her a telegram asking: "Bol Radha bol' sangam hoga ki nahin". From the location where she was doing another film, she sent back a cahle saying: "Hoga hoga hoga". The immigrant population of Loodon, seeing this on BBC might have been all for a soug.

In Simi's film, the sub-titles in Eoglish appear for some time and then vanish ... perhaps she realises that the Britishers are not going to watch it closely. In fact she uses such an extract from "Ram Teri" right at the start, that it would put off any film huff. Another fib is that Nargis was 16 years old when Raj signed her for "Aag". Actually, she had played herome in many films by then. Wheo Raj's family members are interviewed they go haywire in over-praising him. Randhir says that Raj was like a fire hrigade, Rajeev says that he was the Pope of cinema and brother Shashi describes him as a modern incarnation of Lord Krishoa (who was always surrouoded by gopi i.e. maidens). Raj's daughter Rima says that she loved ber father as be was a complete man.

Where Raj sounds more true is while confessiog: "I am full of regrets. I could not reach where I wanted. Now there is very little time left to do thiogs. This film world is a house of heart-breaks. You get the rap both ways, whether you succeed or fail. All my films are like my children. But then some kids are born with some defects, like being lame, etc. 'Mera Nam Joker' was one such child". In Kak's film also Raj is io a lamenting mood: "My life is my work and my work is cinema. I am happy playing the under-dog, Thank God, I am oot ao educated man: I can share the joy with the commoo man. The film is a mass medium, oot a drawing-room conversation".

About Nargis he says: "I still remember that face and look. She was a nohle lady who could feel the pain of others, who could generate spiritual power in anyone". This is juxtaposed with her soug from "Shri 420" which says: "Main na rabungi, tum na rahoge, phirh hirahengi nishaniyan" and the scene shows three children walking away in the rain. The irony is that they are the children of Raj's wife Krishna (playing bit roles). It asserts the showman's theory that his actress cannot be the mother of his children. But it does not justify his love

Both films are a feast for those who revel in oostalgia. Apart from the surfeit of songs and dances, Raj talks about his own past life. The carliest memory is of a religious school drama, where Raj over-acted by going round Christ in an over-long cassock. Io the third scene he fell down and even the actors laughed. Raj could take pride in that he even made Christ laugh. There is also memorable footage from the past, like Raj with Pandit Nehru at the golden jubilee celehratioo of Indian Cinema, or Raj's visit to USSR wheo Russians sang "Awara Hoon" with him. There is some specially shot (and acted) footage where the aged Rajin bed in his house gets up and takes the artificial device for breathing.

Then he says: "I can't help making films and I can't belp going breathless". There are semi-circular camera shots of him with different expressions as he recalls the past. The scene from "Mera Nam Joker" where the clowo's heart is removed and doctors operate on him came very near to his real-life conditioo in the Delhi hospital, when Simi's film was being telecast. After his death, television put up different tribute programmes. One was so badly recorded that nothing could be heard of what the film people and politicians were saying. The second one, also dooe hy

Sai Paranipe io Hindi, proved better. Ashok Kumar said that they lived in the same area, Chembur, and had been friends from childhood. There could not be a merrier person. Dev Anand gave the routine line that Raj is oot dead, he lives in the hearts and minds of people. L.V. Prasad said that Raj did the unusual role io "Sharda" which other heroes refused. Eveo the Delhi doctors praised him hy saying that Raj was a very brave patient, who would smile "good morning" without fail till he was unconscious.

Some apt remarks came from Basu Bhattacharya who made only one film "Teesri Kasam" with him. Speaking in hroken Hindi, Basu said that Raj can be called a restless actor and a dissatisfied film maker. He loved every moment of film-making but he did not see his real dreams come true. His earlier films were his best work. But later he was overpowered Choudhry said that deep inside the commercial showman was an intellectual who wanted to make better films. That is why after seeing Bimal Roy's realistic "Do Bigha Zamin" he had said: 'I wish I had made this

The final touch of grief as well as hope was promoting the idea that Raj Kapoor will be reborn very soon. Manmohan Desai said that he believed in re-hirth and this will happen soon. Rajendra Kumar, who was like a younger hrother, quoted "I will die early. But don't worry. I will go fast and back almost immediately". So after 15 years we will have another Raj Kapoor. This was soon echoed by many fans.

Whether we believe it or not, it only shows the deep affection which so many people had for Raj Kapoor and their inability to accept that he is oo longer

JUNIOR TIMES

Dear Junior Readers,

In my letter to you on Tuesday. I talked about how we should be happy with what we have and not feel jealous or think ourselves unlucky because we cannot have everything we want.

We should try to stop comparing ourselves to those people who have more and Instead, spend more time thinking and caring about the many millions in our world who have a lot less. Think of the children who perhaps have no food, no clothes, ore otways ill and live in dirty, dangerous places. Think that maybe their parents cannot find work or their parents are not alive, so the older children have to work long hours in help to earn money to buy food for their vounger brothers and sisters. If they live in big cities, the children perhaps work for bad people and start to live bad lives themselves. We cannot imagine how terrible their lives are. There are children who have food, clothes and somewhere to live, but have other problems. Think of children who are blind or deaf or cannot move their bodies. Think of children who are always in hospital or have illnesses which hurt all the time.

We must not forget these poor children, we must care about them and try to help them. Be kind to anyone who is not as lucky as you and remember that there are many many in the world who would be happy with even half the things you have.

The miller, his son and the ass

A MILLER and his son were driving their ass to a neighbouring fair to sell

him. They had not gone far when they met a troop of girls returning from the town, talking and laugh-

Look there! cried one of them; 'did you see such fools, to be trudging along the road on foot, when they might be riding!

The old man, hearing this, quietly bade his son get on the ass, and walked along merrily by the side of him. Presently they came to a group of old men, who were talking together. 'There!' said one of them, 'it proves what I was saying. What respect is shown to old age in these days? Do you see that idle young rogue riding while his old father has to walk?"

Get down, you good-for-nothing, and let the old man rest his weary limbs!' cried another. Upon this the father made his son dismount and got up himself; but they had not proceeded far when they met a company of women and children.

'Why, you lazy old fellow!' cried several people at once, how can you

'Pray, honest friend,' said a townsman, 'is that ass your own?'
'Yes,' replied the old

'By the way you load him, one would not have thought so,' said the other. Why, you two fellows are better able to carry the poor beast than he you!" 'If you think it the right thing to do,' said the old man, 'we can but try.' So, alighting with his son, they tied the ass's legs to a stout pole, which they shouldered, and so got ready to carry him over a bridge that led to the town.

This was so entertaining a sight that the people ran out in crowds to laugh at it, until the ass, not liking the noise nor the situation, hroke from the cords that bound him and tumbled off the pole into the river below.

Annoyed and ashamed, the old man made his way home again, convinced that by endeavouring to please everybody he had pleased nobody, and lost his ass into the bargain. Moral: He who tries to please everybody pleases

'I do not care a bit for any of them,' said the fox at last. 'Things may be very bad, as you say, but I have a thousand tricks to show my enemies before they can do me harm.'

'You are fortunate,' replied the cat. 'For my part, I have only one way of evading my enemies, only one method of escape and if that fails all is lost.' 'I am sorry for you with all my heart,' said Reynard. 'If one could tell a friend from a foe in these difficult times. I would show you one or two of my

TWO friends were travelling on the same road together when they came face to face with a bear.

One in great fear, and without a thought of his companion, climbed into a tree and hid.

The other, seeing that, single-handed, he was no match for Bruin the bear, threw himself on the ground and pretended to be dead for he had heard that a bear will not touch a dead body.

Jewellery tomfoolery

The illusion:

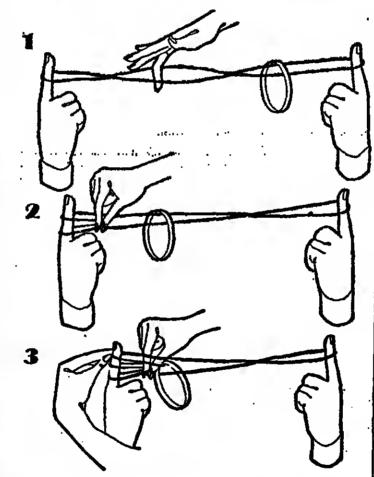

A solid bangle bracelet is threaded over both strands of a long chain necklace. Each end of the chain is then hooked over someone's index fingers. The challenge is to remove the bracelet from the chain while leaving the chain still looped over two fingers ... and surprisingly, you do! The trick:

With your right middle finger pointing down towards the floor place it on your side of the chain between the bracelet and the person's right finger. Pushing against that strand of the chain, lift it so you can transfer it to the other side of the chain. The two strands now make an X in front of and behind your middle finger (1). Put your right index finger in the loop on the side of the X to the left of your middle finger, slide your thumh down through the same loop as your middle finger, and put the tips of your index finger and thumh together. (Keep these two fingers tightly together until it's time to remove the bracelet.) Slide your right hand to the left and transfer the loop around your middle finger down onto the person's upright finger separate your right finger and thumh, and take all of the fingers of your right hand out of the chain. When you pull on the bracelet it will come off the chain leaving it still looped over the fingers.

That was easy, wasn't it?

When the reptiles flew

Perhaps we shall never know for what mysterious reasons some of the rep-tiles suddenly tried to take to the air and conquer the sky. The fact is, however, that traces of numerous winged reptiles are to be found next to the fossils of the great dinosaurs dating from more than 130 million years ago.

One of the most widespread and the most ancient was the Dimorphodon. It looked like a monstrous bat and its size was remarkable: its skull alone measured 22 centimetres long.

The large-skulled Dimorphodons disappeared quickly, to be followed by other winged reptiles of various shapes and sizes. The Rhamphorhynchus was very common, with its peculiar tail ending in a diamond-shaped rudder, and there were various pterodactyls. The name means 'winged fingers' and refers to the very long little finger which kept the whole flap of flying-membrane taut.

In the course of time the winged reptiles grew bigger and higger and better and better at flying. The largest and the best at flying was probably the Pteranodon, fossils of which have been found in North America and Rus-

It had a wing span of a good 7 metres and spent its time skimming over the water, catching fish and shellfish. Its incredibly wide wings prevented it from walking comfortably so, on the ground, it was probably compelled to crawl on its stomach but, in the air, with its light weight of only 12 kilos, it was amazingly agile.

Like the land dinosaurs, the winged reptiles, too, disappeared from our globe almost without warning, about 75 million years ago.

When the ancestors of the birds appeared Strange as it may seem, the first birds did not evolve from the winged reptiles. Their forerunner was certainly a reptile but a different kind from that of the flying Sauria. The first of these creatures to leave us a clear picture on the rocks was the Archaeopteryx, which lived with the great dinosaurs over 130 million years ago.

The fossil imprints of this primitive bird are so complete that they tell us exactly what it looked like. About as big as a pigeon, it was a strange mixture of half bird and half reptile. Obvious signs of its close relationship with reptiles are the movable, clawed fingers on its wings, its tail of twenty individual joints and its toothed jaw. Yet its body was covered with a fringe of feathers, which was something completely

Its wings were no longer a sheet of skin hut a fan of feathers which spread ont' and beat the air as it flew. It was still a very simple flying machine, in need of a great many improvements and, indeed, the Archaeopteryx was a poor flyer, hut its appearance marked an important stage in the history of evolution. The first bird was definitely not a predator because its jaws were too weak. Perhaps it only fed on fruit, berries and small larvae. To take off, it clambered up to the top of a tree and launched itself out into

After this first laborious performance, the birds multiplied rapidly. Their ability to fly improved and they became the only true lords of the sky.

There was a time, in the evolution of the animals, when the fiercest predators of the plains were not mammals hut enormous birds with savage beaks. They could not fly but ran with great speed. All derived from the primitive Archaeopteryx, they soon increased in number, sometimes reaching gigantic proportions, and competed for the hunting field with the carnivorous mam-

GCC to consider unified system for industry

June 29, (OPECNA): The General Secretariat of the six-member Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC) is considering a unified system of regulations governing the setting up of industrial projects in member states.

In a statement to reporters bere yesterday, Dr Mobammad Al Rashed, director of the department of industry, electricity, desalination and Technology at the GCC secretariat said that the new regulations aimed at avoiding duplication of industrial ventures in member states.

He said steps were being taken to encourage joint ventures among GCC states, which include OPEC members Kuwait, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the UAE along with Bahrain and BAHRAIN, June 29, (Reuter): The UAE has carried out a threat to flout its OPEC quota, authorising companies to pump almost 20 per cent more oil in July, industry sources said today.

"This should bring (oil) prices down very quickly," said one trader. "It is yet another link in the chain of disarray which is creeping into OPEC."

The sources said the UAE Higher Council for Petroleum told companies in the main producing emirate of Ahu Dhahi they could hoost July output to 1.1 million barrels per day (BPD) from about 930,000 in June. Pumping

With Dubai pumping 350,000 to 400,000 BPD, total UAE production would rise to 3.5 million BPD - well above a quota of 948,000 BPD set by the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

The sources said the move showed the UAE was intent on rejecting its OPEC quota and would put an additional 200,000 to 300,000 BPD on the already over-supplied world oil market. Oil Minister Mana Said Al Oteiba has repeatedly rejected the quota, claiming that with recoverable reserves of around 100 billion barrels the UAE is second to Saudi Arabia and

The sources said Ahu Dhabi had paved the way for its higher July output by increasing production in June by nine per cent to 930,000 BPD for 850,000 in the second half of May.

They said the authorisation indicated Abu Dhabi had found buyers for its increased volumes of crude, most likely through offering higger discounts to its main Japanese customers.

Pressure

"It won't be wrong to assume the Japanese want the oil because the prices are attractive compared with what Saudi Arabia and other Gulf countries are offering," a trader said.

"This will probably also put pressure on other Gulf producers to cut their prices," be added.
Another said the UAE might be hoping OPEC would take its demands more seriously. "They are behaving just like Iraq," be Iraq is not included in OPEC's current production pact as it rejects a quota less than that of its Gulf war foe, Iran.

Meanwhile, the Ahu Dhahi government, bas finalised feasibility studies for two major investment projects in foreign oil companies, pending final approval, according to a newspaper report.
The projects to be implemen-

DHAKA, June 29, (Reuter): Japan has written off more than $2 billion in loans to Bangladesh, officials said today.

"This will mean a tremendous foreign exchange saving for us," said a Bangladesb Finance Min-

Government officials, who said they were still waiting for official confirmation of the Japanese move from Tokyo, said Dhaka received more than $2 hillion in yen loans from Japan between 1978 and 1987.

Luxury housing market is booming

NEW YORK, June 29, (Reuter): The luxury housing market is booming on almost every continent and soaring prices are forcing firt-time bome buyers to settle for something smaller, further afield or rented.

In Asia, Africa and Latin America — and even in the Soviet Union where bomeownership is rare -- the trend is towards the suburbs or out of the city completely.

By contrast, in Western Europe there is a revival in innercity bousing with 'gentrification' — renovation of run-down bouses in once unfashionable areas - an increasingly attractive proposition.

Foreign buyers have become intensely active in hlue-chip neighbourhoods of numerous major cities since the stock market crash last October, especially the Japanese whose strong yen and sky-high prices at bome make overseas property seem cheap.

With luxury apartments of just 750 square feet (69 square metres) fetching more than $8 million in Tokyo, France has become a favourite for Japanese bargain hunters.

Since the crasb, Japanese buyers have flooded the property market, buying into the top end of the range and acquiring huge tracts of land," said a French real estate agent.

West Germany has a similar story, with Japanese eagerly bidding for mansions and castles.

In Hawaii, Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi has called for beavy taxes to curb Japanese speculation which he said caused a 32.3 per cent surge in land prices on the island of Oahu last year, where most of the action has been, the average price of a sin-gle-family bome went from $297,000 in 1986 to $475,000 last year, an increase of 60.2 per cent," be said.

cconomy, had a similar story. In Poland, where foreign property ownership is banned, many of the most expensive bomes are bought hy Poles who worked for several years in the West and came back with a small fortune.

South Korean surplus continues to rise

SEOUL, June 29, (AP): South Korea's current surplus reached $892 million in May, np from $836 million from May 1987, the Bank of Korea announced today. The aggregate of surpluses since January through May widened to $4.78 hillion, an increase of $1.18 billion from the same five-month period last year, according to the Central Bank report. Despite labour strikes and the South Korean won's appreciation, officials at the Central Bank predicted the year-end surplus will top last year's $9.7 billion and the government's target of $7 billion. The current account measures one country's trade in merchandise and services with other countries. The government has said it will hold down its 1988 surplus within $7 billion, partly to avoid friction with the United States and other countries which run trade deficits with this country. Bank officials said the trade halance in May showed a surplus of $665 million, up from $548 million a year ago and boosting the aggregate for the first five months to $3.75 billion from $2.6 billion in the same period-last year. The invisible trade surplus in May was listed at $108 million, down from $181 million a year ago, and the January-May (ally totalled $309 million, down by $264 million over the same period last year.

Brazilian city launches campaign to boost tourism

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 29, (Reuter): Rio yesterday annou ced an $800,000 US novertising campaign aimed at cleaning up its image as Brazil's capital of crime and grime. Local tourism authorities said the campaign would seek to attract American tourists scared away by reports of violence and dirty beaches in Brazil's second largest city. "When people nhroad read about Rio, they usually read about the disasters and tragedies. We're going to show them it isn't all bad," Joao Doria, president of Brazil's Tourism Board, Embratur, told a news conference. The six-month plan includes full-colour advertisements in leading US magazines and free trips to Rio for 3,500 US tour operators, journalists and their families. Doria said Embratur has bired a top New York agency to manage the campaign under the slogan: "Rio is wonderful". About 660,000 foreign tourists visited Rio last year, 5.8 per cent more than in 1986, making it Brazil's single biggest tourist attraction. But Doria said the first figures for this year show the number of visitors has stopped growing "and when yon're not growing, yon're losing."

Venezuelan and German firms form petrochemicals joint venture

CARACAS, June 29, (AP): The Venezuelan state firm Pequiven and Veba Oel A.G., a major German refiner, signed an accord to undertake feasibility studies leading to the construction of a joint-venture petrochemicals plant, according to a Pequiven statement. The accord forming Petropropano de Venezuela SA was signed on Monday in Caracas. Pequiven and Veba each hold 49 per cent of the company's shares and remaining shares will be traded in the Yeneznelan capital market,

The plant for making 250,000 metric tons per year of propylene and polypropylene will cost over $275 million of which Pequiven and Veba will each pay in around $54 million, Pequiven said. About 60 per cent of the plant's cost will be covered with loans, which have not yet been acquired, it said. Seventy per cent of the plant's production is earmarked for export, it said.

World Bank undergoes close scrutiny

(Reuter): The World Bank is undergoing its most critical scrutiny in many years, creating a hiatus that could endanger US dominance of the development

Legislation to increase funding for the hank is tied down in Congress, frustrating the Reagan administration which counts on the bank to spearbead Treasury Secretary James Bak-er's three-year-old Third World deht initiative.

Conservative American critics - always suspicious of world aid bodies - say the bank has wandered too far afield from its roleof helping the world's poor.

Accuse They accuse it of spreading socialism and helping countries opposed to US foreign policy goals.

The US share of the $74.8 billion funding approved by the Bank is $14 billion. However, only three per cent of this total must be put up in cash. The US Congress has only to appropriate $70.1 million a year for six years to cover the US share. The US appropriation is critical to the bank even though the funding has already been approved by 75 per cent of the voting power of the organisa-tion's 151 member countries and thus has actually gone into effect.

Failure to get the US approval could jeopardise the Bank's ahility to borrow money in the financial markets. The borrow-the World Bank, annually sending hundreds of millions of dollars in scarce resources to vernments that abuse human rights, export terrorism, and pur-sue accelerated production of

The Cato Institute, another conservative research group, goes even further, observing that although the bank started with the highest ideals some 40 years ago, it now consistently does more harm than good for the world's poorest."

It says "the Bank exists largely to maximise the transfer of resources to Third World governments (and) by doing so...bas promoted nationalisation of Third World economies and has increased political and bureaucratic control over the lives of the poorest of the poor." Criticism Such criticism has been troubling to an administration that has prided itself on taking a hard line on Bank loans going to countries that opposed US foreign policy goals and that has taken steps to reform Bank loan

The World Bank, because of its understanding on how Third World economies are structured, was singled out for a special role in leading the attack on the debt crisis hy the Baker.

He said the Bank should increase the lending it had been doing for economic reform which, to a large degree, had the effect of channelling more money into debt relief.

Critics of the direction argue that by reducing project lending, the Bank is moving away from its basic role of building roads, schools, dams, sewerage systems and other basic structures.

On the other hand, some critics argue that the Bank has dragged its feet in coming to grips with the debt crisis, showing little if any innovation on how the profound problems might be dealt with.

It is expected that eventually the Congress, after betening to the myriad argnments, will approve the appropriation but few think the debate will stop

London Stock Market Report

U.K. STOCKS NIXED TO FIRM IN LATE BUSINESS LONDON, JUNE 29, REUTER - EQUITIES STOOD MIXED IN LATE TRADING AFTER A MODERATELY ACTIVE SESSION, BUT A SHARP GAIN IN PHARMACEUTICAL COMPANT GLAXO, WHICH HAS A HEAVY WEIGHTING IN THE INDEX, SAW THE FTSE 100 3.8 HIGHER AT 1,860.5 AT 1517 GMT.
GLAXO ROSE 23P 10 988 AFTER BROKERS BARCLAYS DE ZOETE WEDD

RAISED ITS FULL YEAR PROFITS FORECAST TO 835 MLN STG FROM ITS PREVIOUS 810 MLN ESTIMATE MAINLY BECAUSE OF THE STRONGER DOLLAR. REMEMED SPECULATIVE ACTIVITY AND HIGHER CLOSINGS LAST NIGHT IN NEW YORK AND TOKYO HELPED UNGERPIN PRICES, AS DID A FEELING THAT THE RECENT UPHEAVALS BECAUSE OF BASE RATE SPECULATION WERE

"ALL THE TALK ABOUT BASE AND EXCHANGE RATES APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN FORGOTTEN AT LEAST FOR TODAT....MIND YOU, IT'S SUCH A FICKLE MARKET AT THE MOMENT THAT ANTTHING COULD HAPPEN TOMORROW," ONE CEALER SAIC.

YESTERDAY'S HALF-POINT BASE RATE RISE TO 9-1/2 PCT WAS THE FOURTH MOVE IN BASE RATE THIS MONTH AND LEFT MANY ANALYSTS ANTICIPATING YET ANOTHER MOVE, THIS TIME TO 10 PCT, SOONER RATHER THAN LATER.

"WORRIES ABOUT BASE RATES ARE GOING TO BE AT THE BACK OF PEOPLE'S MINDS FOR A WHILE BUT IN THE MEANTINE THET ARE STARTING IO TURN THEIR ATTENTION TO OTHER THINGS AGAIN," ONE DEALER SAID.

London Gold

LONDON, JUNE 29, REUTER - GOLO BULLION CLOSED SHARPLT OOWN THIS AFTERNOON AT 3-1/2 MONTHS LOWS, UNDER PRESSURE FROM FALLING AGRICULTURAL FUTURES MARKETS IN CHICAGO AND THE STRONGER DOLLAR

AGAINST STERLING, DEALERS SAIO.

GOLD EXTENDED EARLIER LOSSES TO CLOSE AT 433.50/434.00 DLRS AN OUNCE, SHOWING A LOSS OF NEARLY 10 OLRS FROM TUESDAY'S CLOSING LEVEL OF 443.00/443.50, BUT WAS LITTLE CHANGED FROM THE AFTERNOON FIX OF 433.5S DLRS.

TRADING WAS GENERALLY QUIET AS THE MARKET DRIFTED DOWN ON LIGHT LONG LIQUIDATION BEFORE GOLD FOUND SOME SUPPORT AROUND 432 OLRS, THERE IS MAJOR SUPPORT AT 430 DLRS, DEALERS SAID.

London Money Market

LONDON, JUNE 29, REUTER - MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES WERE QUIETLT STEADY TOWARD THE CLOSE AT LEVELS WHICH STILL LOOK FOR A FURTHER 1/2 POINT HIKE IN BASE RATES TO 10 PCT.

DEALERS REMAIN CONVINCED THAT, EVEN AFTER TESTERDAY'S 1/2 POINT RISE, BASE RATES ARE JUST NOT HIGH ENOUGH TO CHOKE OFF THE CURRENT INFLATIONART EXPANSION IN CONSUMER SPENDING. THUS THE KEY THREE MONTH STERLING INTERBANK RATE, THE BEST GUIDE TO MARKET THINKING ON BASE RATES, REMAINED UNMOVED AT 9-7/8 13/16.

DEALERS ARE NOW HOPING THAT IF, AS EXPECTED, THE BUNDESBANK RAISES GERMAN DISCOUNT RATE TOMORROW, IT WILL PROVIDE FURTHER IMPETUS TO THE MARKET'S PUSH FOR HIGHER BRITISH RATES.

Tokyo Stock Market Report

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE NIGHER IN HEAVY TRADE TOKYO, JUNE 29, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED HIGHER ON BUYING OF LARGE CAPITAL ISSUES AND HIGH TECH SHARES AS INVESTORS TRIED TO SHRUG OFF DOLLAR CONCERNS, BROKERS SAID.

"INFLATIONARY FEARS IN THE U.S. SEEM TO MAVE SUBSIDED
SOMEWHAT, WHICH WILL PREVENT U.S. INTEREST RATES FROM RISING," SAID A FUND MANAGER AT A MAJOR JAPANESE BANK. "THIS MAY NELP CURB THE DOLLAR FROM BEING PUSHED NIGHER."

THE NIKKEI INDEX CLIMBED 209.24 POINTS, OR 0.76 PCT, TO 27,607.33. IT LOST 36.92 POINTS ON TUESDAY.

RISES ALMOST MATCHED FALLS IN MASSIVE TURNOVER OF 2.5 BILLION SHARES, MATCHING TUESDAY'S VOLUME. SECURITIES HOUSE, ELECTRICAL, PRECISION INSTRUMENT, PHARMACEUTICAL, AIRLINE, AUTO, SNIPBUILDING, RAILWAY/BUS, GLASS/CEMENT, SNIPPING AND SOME MANUFACTURING SHARES ROSE. BANK, CREDIT/LEASE, GAS, COMMUNICATIONS, RETAIL WAREHOUSE, RUBBER, NON-FERROUS METAL AND MACHINERY ISSUES

DECLINED. A CLINULATIVE OROP OF OVER 1,000 POINTS SINCE JUNE 20 LURED BARGAIN-HUNTERS BACK INTO THE MARKET EVEN AS THE DOLLAR CONTINUED TO TEST NEW PEAKS FOR THE YEAR. BROKERS SAID THERE WAS A SHIFT FROM STEELS TO OTHER LARGE CAPITAL ISSUES SUCH AS

SNIPBUILDERS AND HEAVY ELECTRICALS. WALL STREET'S 22-POINT GAIN IN THE DOW-JONES INDUSTRIAL AVERAGE OVERNIGHT TO 2,131 BOLSTERED INVESTOR SENTIMENT, AS DID A DROP IN THE COMMODITY RESEARCH BUREAU INDEX. WHICH ALLEVIATED SOME INFLATION CONCERNS. EXPECTATIONS THAT IT MAY RAIN IN THE DROUGHT-NIT U.S. MIDWEST ALSO SOOTHED FEARS OF RISING PRICES AND HELPED SET THE SCENE FOR A REBOUND HERE,

"WE'VE COME THIS FAR WITH GOOD BUSINESS RESULTS," SAID YUSUKE FUJIWARA, HEAD OF TRADING AT BARING SECURITIES. "WHILE THERE IS STILL CONCERN OVER THE CAP FOR THE DOLLAR, THE MARKET HAS DECIDED TO GET ON WITH IT."

Hong kong Market Report

HONG KONG, JUNE 29, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED LOWER ON SELLING BY OVERSEAS INVESTORS WHO ARE CONCERNED THAT RECENT RISES IN INTEREST RATES WILL UNDERMINE THE PROPERTY MARKET, BROKERS SAID.

THE HANG SENG INDEX FELL 13.24 TO 2,648.22 AND THE HONG KONG INDEX DROPPED 9.45 TO 1,749.82.

THE HANG SENG INDEX WAS UP SHARPLY IN EARLY TRADING BEFORE THE OVERSEAS SELLERS EMERGED.

MREW YORK IS UP, TOKYO'S UP, THE HONG KONG DOLLAR'S UP AND THE U.S. DOLLAR'S UP. HONG KONG SHOULD BE IN BETTER SHAPE," A U.S. BROKER SAID.

KUWAITI dinar deposit rates eased yesterday in early trading on high liquidity, then firmed as banks bought dollars antid renewed strength in the US currency, dealers said.

Banks built up long positions in the dollar during most of last week as it surged against other major international currencies. But they unwound those positions on Monday and Tuesday as the dollar slipped.

Gold prices decline sharply

US dollar surges despite intervention fears

LONDON, June 29, (Agencies): The US dollar was higher in European tradiog today despite expectations of intervention by European central banks to keep its rise under control.

Gold prices, which began falling sbarply in New York yesterday, continued dropping io quiet European trading, hitting their lowest levels in Europe since March.

Dealers said gold was coming under pressure from the stronger dollar and receding fears of inflation.

Support

The dollar was getting support from Japanese remarks that appeared to indicate a desire for a higher dollar, but the currency was off its early highs amid worries of central bank intervention, foreign exchange dealers said.

Traders in Frankfurt said the market was still reacting to Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, who said the Bank of Japan "isn't thinking" of intervening to stem the dollar's receot rally.

"The market is being driven by the dollar-yen rate, and as long as this seems headed upward, theo the dullar will continue to be firm," said a trader in Frankfurt.

However, fears that central banks would intervene as they did yesterday were putting a psychological barrier on the dollar's climb, dealers said.

"Trading is nervous but light, as everybody is waiting for possible interventions by European ceotral banks and a likely balf-point rise of the discount rate in West Germany," said one trader with a major Italian commercial bank.

"In the absence of any intervention later in the day the dollar is set to rise again," be

But dealers say they are unsure the central banks can stop the dollar rally, especially since neither the US Federal Reserve nor the Bank of Japan joined the European intervention.

The central banks worned that a strong dollar would boost import prices and so risk boosting inflatioo. That worry had been especially strong in West Germany and Japan.

Bargains But with Tokyo's Nikkei average down 1,000 points since June 20, many iovestors decided there are now bargains to be had.

"We've come this far with good business results," said Yusuke Fujiwara, bead of trading at brokers Baring Securities in Tokyo. "While there is still coocern over the cap for the dollar, the market has decided to get on with it," he said.

West German shares were up. Paris sbares rose 0.32 per cent, the All-Share Swiss index rose four points to 868.4 and Sydney's All-Ordinaries index rose 16 points to 1,560.6.

WASHINGTON, June 29. (Reuter): The US iodex of leadinflation. ing ecocomic indicators, the government's main gauge of future business activity, fell 0.1 per cent in May after rising 0.5 per cent in April, the Commerce Department said today. The department also reported sales of new single-family homes fell 0.3 per ceot last month, to an annual rate of 658.000, after a rise of 1.1 per cent in April.

Consistent The slight drop in the index of leading indicators, which was in line with expectatioos, was consistent with other statistics recently that pointed to a slowdown in the economy after a rapid start to the year, economists said.

A brisk 3.6 per cent growth rate in the first three months of the year, coupled with signs of continued vigour in the second quarter, prompted the White House last week to raise its forecasts for 1988 growth to 3.0 per cent from 2.4 per cent.

To meet the administration's forecast, the economy would bave to grow at a 2.8 per cent rate in the final three quarters of the

The dip in the leading economic index in May followed three months of gains. Five of the nine components of the index fell last month, led by lower stock prices.

The 0.5 per cent rise in April's basket was previously estimated by the Commerce Department at 0.2 per cent. The upward revision reflected data that was not available last month showing higher credit outstanding.

The other four indicators that contributed to the May decline were contracts and orders for plant and equipment, a rise in average weekly initial claims for jobless insurance, a sharter average work week, and fewer building permits.

Four indicators were positive: the speed with which suppliers filled orders, manufacturers' new orders for consumer goods and materials, changes in sensitive materials prices, and the money

Measures

The index of coincident indicators, which measures the state of the economy, rose 0.2 per cent in May after falling 0.1 per cent io April.

The ratio of coincident to lagging indicators, which some economists believe signals changes in the economy better than the leading index, rose to 120.1 in May from 119.9 in April but remained below the March level

The drop in home sales was not as steep as Wall Street had forecast. But the government revised down the rises it had reported for April, to 1 1 per een: from 4.0 per cent and for March. to 0.8 per cent from 1.2 per cent. base of 100. Michael Evans, head of a Washington economic consulting firm, said the economy is really doing better than the leading index would suggest because much of the growth this year has come from a surge in export sales, which the index does not track very well. Some economists have begun to express concerns that the drought in the Midwest will boost inflation this year because of higher food prices.

But Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economist, said last week the White House was sticking by its forecast that consumer prices would rise only 4.5 per cent this year, tittle changed from last year's inflation rate.

"Every time there is a tubber boom, there is a market boom," P.H.S. Lim, president of the Malaysian Investors' Associatioo said io an interview.

Rubber prices, benefitting from strong demand from tyre makers and AIDS-related demand for surgical gloves and condoms, are at their highest level for eight years.

Palmoil prices, reacting to surgiog soyabean prices due to drought in the US Midwest, are

Lee Siao Cbio, managing director of Arab-Malaysian Securities, said substantial foreign buying of Malaysian stocks, particularly by British investors, began in April after the Central Baok released on optimistic anoual report.

Brokers estimate that at least 1.5 billion ringgit ($600 million) has poured ioto the Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange (KLSE) since then. Mohamad Hatta Yahaya, sen-

"Singapore brokers are promoting Malaysian stocks overseas instead of their shares,"

During the first five months of this year the KLSE industrial index rose 34 per cent, while Sin-gapore's Straits Times industrial index increased only 22 per cent.

A pronouoced rally in May, led by rubber stocks, lifted the Kuala Lumper market above the traditionally stronger Singapore market for the first time, analysts British-based stockbroker James Capel said in a recent review of Asian markets that the Malaysian Stock Market was likely to outperform other regional markets in 1988, while average corporate earnings would grow by almost a third. The boom was reflected in Mahathir broke away to form a oew party after UMNO Baru was outlawed for alleged malpractices at Congress in 1987 which re-elected him as leader.

Jeffrey Spier has his own problems. He intends to make a career in archaeology, he says, and the hoard is his piece de resistance. Any archaeologist working in the classical period knows that Turkey perhaps even more than Greece and ltaly, is the place to go for new finds and digs.

Anguish

William Koch, if worse comes to worst, stands to lose a few million, which is unlikely to cause him anguish. He has resolutely kept a low profile, refusing to respond to even simple questions.

Take a matter pertaining to the activities of his non-profit foundation. One year after the symposium at Oxford in 1986. a publication on the event, from British Archaeological Reports, appeared, containing the papers given at the original event and a preface hy Ian Carradice, curator of coins and medals at the British Museum.

In it, Carradice expressed gratitude and stated that "the coins were provided by a foundation in Boston." Was it William Koch's non-profit foundation? That made sense, hut Koch and the foundation's personnel would not elucidate. Nor did careful reading of the foundation's public reports to date provide the answer.

Whose were the coins? The Oxbow Corporation's spokesman John Klarfeld, should have known; Oxbow put up most of the purchase price of $3.5 million, but in various conversations, Klarfeld either professed ignorance of the coins or was evasive.

Koch's desire for privacy has not spared him from a battle nio numismatics cir OKS's entry into the wonderful world of coins has upset the big players who have so far controlled the action, most notably the tanned, Buddha-like Bruce McNall, of Numismatic Fine Arts, in Beverly Hills.

Eighteen years ago, McNall took a joh at the company, which he acquired in 1977, renaming it Numismatic Fine Arts. In 1974, he was involved in huying and selling the last prehoard decadrachm, which eventually went to Nelson Bunker Hunt, whom he also advised on the acquisition of antiquities.

These days, at age thirty-seven, he owns a Thoroughbred syndicate, the Los Angeles Kings hockey team, and the Gladden Entertainment production company (of War Games fame), among other enterprises.

McNall's notable contribution to the numismatics industry has been to bring more... powerful investors - people who buy coins for huge sums in order to sell for even larger sums --- into the market.

These investors have helped to support prices at the high end of the market. Meantime, the economy has changed to favour-NFA: investment advisers are now steering clients toward coins as a good hedge against inflation.

McNall knows the higgest private investors, runs the big-gest auction house, and establi-shed the first fund that trades in coins, the Athena Fund. He and Silva Hurter of Zurich's Bank Leu dominate the numismatics market. It is easy to see how an incursion the size of William Koch's, with so many important coins, has a potential to unsettle the status quo.

So long as Koch, Kagan, and Spier went through the normal channels, consulting experts and talking to dealers, the industry was happy. Then, inexplicably, the museums hopes for donations came to nothing (much to their annoyance), offers to dealers were withdrawn, and Koch's coins began to emerge piecemeal on the market. McNall could not have been Harlan J. Berk for a reported $295,000. Another was sold through the Swiss auctioneers Tkalec and Rauch to Silvia Hurter for $295,000.

Anton Tkalec, who also advises a European coin-invest-ment company called Damas-tion, bought some sixty coins, including three decas from Koch, for "considerably over a million dollars," he says. He sold two of the decas and some fifty others to McNall's NFA. And then, on March 10, 1988. Tkalec attended the auction in Los Angeles.

Auction

At that auction, the Turkish government merely applied a little discreet pressure through its lawyers. Botein Hays & Sklar. Customs agents did not raid the auction site; there were no injunctions. The auctions passed apparently without incident, except for one

By the end of the day, the ten coins from the hoard were back in the possession of Numis-matic Fine Arts, Within a month, they were in the custody of Turkish authorities in the United States.

At the auction, Tkalec bought back some of the coins he had just sold to NFA in order to simplify their return to the Turks. These purchases did

Because the numismatics market is in the West, the 1,900 coins of the decadracher hoard percolated there

This chart traces their various, often complicated paths, owners, and believed whereabouts at press time.

What the hoard could buy

1N antiquity, one silver talent equalled 6,000 drachms, which could huy you as many as 150 slaves, or 1,300 oxen, or 2,000 pairs of sandals, or ten metric tons of wheat - the equivalent of one year's food expenses for perhaps twelve families of five

The Turks who found the silver coins in 1984 sold two of the least valuable, Lycian staters, to a goldsmith in Antalya for $175 each. Had they attempted to sell them to the city's museum, a special committee would have convened to offer the highest amount legally permitted for each coin: $50. The value of a Lycian stater on the world market is $1,000.

The goldsmith's price of $175 was the equivalent in 1984 of the museum director's monthly salary or that of the police chief who uncovered the incident of the hoard. A Turkish customs of salary of the control of the time made $1250 months. official of the time made $125 a month.

The decadrachm that Ibrahim's mother and sister got as a gift from the excavators was eventually sold for $600,000 in the United States. Had it been offered to the Antalya museum in 1984, the highest sum at the committee's disposal for any antiquities would have been $6,000. The committee might have prevailed upon the Directorate of Museums and Antiquities, in Ankara, to huy the coin. The directorate would then have had to appeal to the minister of finance for funds. If all permissions had been granted, the $600,000 would have amounted to the directorate's entire annual acquisitions hudget. Not a penny more could have been spent by any Turkish museum to purchase antiquities that year.

Let us now assume that the Turkish government wanted to buy the decadrachm hoard at its market value of $10 million. That would take an official request to the National Budget Committee to find the money somewhere. Where? Hm, $10 million --- only two-thirds the total annual hudget of the Antiquities parent body, the Ministry of Culture.

Turks knew about. The other coins in his hands

The manoeuvre appalled OKS. What could be the explanation for NFA's concession without putting up the least legal resistance? Maybe McNall merely wanted to avoid a battle in court.

Then again, speculates a source within the Koch camp, McNall could also have been out to teach the amateurs a painful lesson. That would help loexplain why NFA had advertised the coins brazenly in its catalogue as being from "South Anatolia, Decadrachm Hoard, 1984"; most coins are listed without such specific attribution in coin-sale catalogues. Whatever the rationale, the NFA gesture now had the ohvious effect of pitting the

The precedent made it dif-ficult to sell coins from the hoard openly, if at all. Emphasizing the problems, Tkalec's lawyers contacted Koch's, asking either for the Swiss dealer's money back in return for the coins or for Koch's documents of ownership.

If Koch's title of ownership is in order. Tkalec says, he will ask Turkey to prove its case. If it can, Tkalec knows his reaction: "The Turks must keep the coins." In that event. Tkalec will demand his money hack from Koch, and Koch, in turn, may try to collect his $3.5 million from the smugglers. After all, they had not told him of provenance problems. The McNall camp may not be without its vulnerabilities. McNall and NFA are the managing pariners for Athena Fund I and for its successor, Athena Fund II, now being formed. A fund with general and limited partners. Athena trades in coins, under the auspices of Merrill Lynch, huying low and selling dear. The profits go back to the partners who paid $7 million to get Athena I off the ground and will put up to $40 million into Athena 11.

NFA's problem arises from a clause in the charter of Athena I that was written to prevent NFA, acting as both consultant and vendor to the fund, from simply advising the acquisition of their own coins, perhaps for a good deal more than they cost. Specifically, the clause allows NFA to sell its own coins to Athena I only at cost plus direct expenses.

Fate

Here, we must trace the fate of the one decadrachm that was not part of Koch's hoard. Back in Elmali, Ihrahim's sister and mother sold the coins they had been given hy Hasan Saribag, the ex-mayor of Elmali, and his friend Abdulgani Huzmeli.

This minitreasure was inter-cepted by Silvia Hurter, who skimmed off all but the deca. (That is how she acquired the sole coin in the hoard from the state of Delos, which is also very rare, though less valuable than the deca). Jonathan Rosen, a well-known coin collector in New York and a partner in Atlantis Antiquities Ltd., hought the deca for $225,000, according to him, and sold it to NFA for $275,000. Numismatics insiders say that McNall then sold it for a substantial profit into the Athena Fund 1, which proudly reproduced it in its prospectus. (Most recently, it was sold out of the fund for $600,000, via a dealer.) Both Rosen, who is also a partner in Athenai, and McNall deny the sale to the

Their contention seems to be at odds with the available evidence. The numismatics publication Coin World, in its issue of November 25, 1987. carries a story on the $600,000 deca sold from the Athena fund and prints its picture.

If that is the right coin, it has been identified by a number of experts, including the president of NFA, as part of the hoard. Yet it is definitely not one of Koch's thirteen. Unless there were a hitherto unknown fifteenth decadrachm in the hoard, the pictured coin appears to be Rosen's. If so, its sale to the fund at a profit implies a violation of Athena was still undetermined, but it will not remain so for long. Upon its publication, Turkish sources say, the article you are reading will have been handed to the President of Turkey. Kenan Evren, as he arrives on a state visit to the United States.

At present time, the status of the "greatest hoard of history"

His response will determine whether Turkey, which is already suing the Metropolitan Museum to get back the so-called Lydian Hoard, launches separate legal action in this

The numismatics powers might well hope that the Turkish state gets the hoard back; the coins have already caused them nothing but trouble. Even the emhattled Koch camp might welcome a chance to strike a deal with the Turks, thus bowing gracefully out of what now seems a mess. For everyone concerned except the smugglers, one hoard like this seems plenty enough for the

Are proverbs nuggets of truth or fool's gold?

PROVERBS are heirlooms, treasured and passed on from generation to generation. These pithy, unforgettable phrases seem to sum up timeless wisdom about human nature. But are the truisms really true? Spare the rod and spoil the child:

Few proverbs have been so thoroughly disproved — or have caused so much harm — as this one. Nearly 40 years of research have shown conclusively that the "rod" produces children who are more aggressive than their peers. "Physical punishment teaches that the way to solve problems is to beat up others," says I considered the property of the property o says Leonard Eron, a research psychologist at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He and others explain that having children focus on what they did wrong and why it was wrong encourages them to internalize control of their own actions. But physical punishment, while suppressing misbehaviour in the short run, ultimately promotes nothing more than a determination to avoid getting caught.

In 1960 Eron and his colleagues studied 870 8-year-olds in rural New York and found a clear-cut relationship between the rural New York and found a clear-ent relationship between the severity of the physical punishment they received — ranging from none at all to slaps and spankings — and how aggressive other children judged them to be. Twenty-two years later, the researchers tracked down some of these same people and found that the aggressive kids were now aggressive adults. And those adults now had aggressive children of their own.

He who lives by the sword dies by the sword: If the contemporary "sword" is a handgun, then this maxim seems to be true. A study of more than 700 gunshot deaths in the Seattle area from 1978 to 1983 showed that most of them had occurred in homes where a gun was kept. Moreover, the guns were far more likely to kill a resident than an intruder. In only two cases was a stranger killed; the rest were accidental deaths, suicides or homicides in which the victim was either a friend of the gun owner or a member of the family.

WOMAN'S FALLOPIAN TUBES ARE BLOCKED IN STERILISATION

QUESTION: When they sterilise a woman, do they "cut" the tubes? What does that

ANSWER: If a woman decides she does not want any more children, she can choose to be sterilised, which involves blocking the fallopian tubes, the two hollow arms on either side of the uterus. Each month an egg moves down one of these tubes from the ovary to the titerus, and it is within the tube that a sperm fertilises the egg. If the tube is blocked or cut, the egg and sperm are kept apart and fertilisation does not take place. Female sterilisation has no effect on hormone levels. A sterilised woman's period still occur regularly until menopause. There are several ways to block the tubes; cutting them is only one method. The tubes can be shut with a small plastic clip or rubber band or a loop of each tube can be tied off and then cut. Another procedure uses a small electrical device to burn small portion of both tubes, which then heal shut. Sterilisation can be done at any time either in a hospital or in a clinic and may be performed right after child birth.

Female sterilisation is a permanent and almost perfect form of birth control. It is called permanent because it cannot be easily reversed. If a woman changes her mind about the procedure, there are operations that can be done to reconnect or open the blocked tubes, but there is no guarantee they will work. After sterilisation, there is the possibility that the tubes can reheal over and a pregnancy can occur, hut there is far less chance of this happening than of any other

QUESTION: Have you ever heard of an eye disease that makes your eye into a cone? ANSWER: What you are referring to is a corneal disease called keratoconus. The cornea, the clear protective outer layer covering the iris and pupil, hulges forward and develops into a cone shape. Because the cornea, a major focusing mechanism, now becomes thin and irregularly shaped (astig-matism), patients with keratoconus have very hlurred vision, a high degree of nearsightedness and a reduction in far vision.

The cause is unknown but hereditary factors are involved. Keratoconus progresses form of birth control to fail.

slowly over a number of years, usually starting in the second decade of life, but may become stationary at any time. Hard contact lenses may provide a useful degree of vision in the earlier stages. In the advanced stage, when the cornea appears cone-shaped and the lower lid of the eye appears indented, vision may become so poor that is interferes with normal activities and surgery may be recommended.

Corneal transplantation for keratoconus (lamellar keratoplasty) usually involves surgical removal of the top layers of the person's cornea and replacement with a clear, healthy, donated cornea. New microsurgical techniques and eye hanking procedures have made corneal transplantation safe and effective. The success rate for this type of surgery is more than 90 per cent. A new investigative type of surgery, epikeratophakia, involves suturing a donated graft across the patient's thinned comea, providing flattening of the irregular protrusion, so that the patient can resume daily wear of hard contacts comfortably. 1988 TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES INC.

ENGLAND FACE DIFFICULT TASK AT OLD TRAFFORD

Buoyant West Indies set for 3rd Test

For a team in transition, Viv Richards's West Indians have belied the image in the Test series against England with powerful and authoritative cricket that has recalled their heady, all-conquer-

West Indies, by their own admission not the irresistible force who achieved 5-0 clean sweeps over England in 1984 and 1986, face the third Test starting al Old Trafford, Manchester, tomorrow buoyed by an emphatic 134-ran win in the second Test at Lord's. Puzziing

Richards's side took a 1-0 lead in the five-match series and left England, who have not beaten West Indies in their last 26 Tests, still puzzling out how to overcome the potent Caribbean concoction of instinctively attacking butting and relentless fast bowling. Malcolm Marshall, with 17 wickets in the first two Tests despite nursing a rib injury, is not only the spearhead of the pace attack but an inspiration to the side as they rehuild after the retirements from Test cricket in the last 15 months of Michael Holding, Joel Garner and Larry

The uncapped Childs, 36, has spent the bulk of his career with Gloucestershire but since moving to Essex in 1985 he has enjoyed a fresh lease of life, helping them win the championship in 1986 with 85 wickets.

Cook won the last of his nine Test caps during the 1984 home series against West Indies, in which he played three Tests and took five wickets at a cost of 59.40 apiece.

thigh injury, and fellow puceman Derek Pringle were omitted from the Lord's 12.

Capel, who has been overlooked since England's tour of New Zealand earlier this year. won the vote over Pringle partly by virtue of being a better batsman. Capel's medium pace bowling may also be more effective at Tesi level.

Gatting, who asked not to be chosen for the second Test following his sacking as captain, returns to add substance to the front line batting. He lost the captaincy because England's cricket officials decided he acted irresponsibly in inviting a woman back to his hotel room during the first Test.

Provided His comeback to play under off-spinner John Emburey, who took over as captain at Lord's, provides a reversal of their roles at Middlesex. Emburey faces not only the demanding job of captaincy against a West Indies side growing in confidence, but also the need to restore his reputation as England's first choice spinner.

Emburey would certainly relish the opportunity of performing on a helpful surface as Old Trafford after a lean spell at international level in England, having taken a mere three wickets for 396 runs in his last six home Tests.

RUGBY

New Zealand bemused by 14-man scrum

SINGLETON, Australia, June 29, (Reuter): New Zealand notched their fourth successive win, defeating New South Wales country 29-4 today, but it was the single try by the Australian side which caught the eye. Country, 25-0 down at halftime, rallied magnificently in the second half and were determined to score when awarded a scrum near the All Blacks line.

Fourteen of their players joined the pack, the All Black mean machine' yielded for the first time in many years and country number eight Aibert Model plunged over for a try.

The only worry for the All Blacks was the performance of fly-half Grant Fox, considered the world's best goalkicker. He had an off day with the boot, converting only one try plus a penalty goal.

Stephenson takes Notts to victory

LONDON. June 29, (Reuter): Barbados-born all-rounder Franklyn Stephenson breathed fresh life into Nottinghamshire's ailing defence of the English County Cricket Championship by taking a cureer-best seven for 56 yesterday.

Fast bowler Stephenson fired out Northamptonshire for 122 on the third and last day at Trent Bridge, giving Notts victory by 191 runs. It was only their third success in [1 championship mat-

Departure

Stephenson, in his first season with the county following the departure of Richard Hadlee and Clive Rice at the end of 1987, is now joint leading wicket-taker in the championship this year with team-mate Kevin Cooper. The pace pair each have 61 wickets.

Cooper contributed to Northants' downfall by taking three for 62. while Stephenson beat his previous best performance of six for 19 for Tasmania against Victoria during the 1981-82 Australian season, Fust-medium bowler Jonathan Agnew sustained his fine form for Leicestershire with his season's best of six for 39 against Gloucestershire that took his tally of wickets to 53.

Agnew and England paceman Phillip Defreitas, with four for 63, exploited a damp and likely pitch at Gloucester as the home side, needing 225 to win, were dismissed for 144.

Finding considerable bounce and movement. Agnew took five wickets in an innings for the fifth time this season, and Gloucestershire looked in the hunt only while England discard Bill Athey (41) and Tony Wright (34) puton-69 for the third wicket.

Lancashire left-arm spinner lan Folley also produced his best figures of the season — six for 20 - to send Glamorgan crashing to 47 all out and defeat by 72 runs

Folley and veteran off-spinner Jack Simmons, who snapped up four for nine, fully exploited a turning pitch as Glamorgan collapsed to their lowest firsttotal since 1979 when they were dismissed for 46 by Kent at Car-

Yorkshire pulled off their first championship win of the season at the ninth attempt, beating Sussex by three wickets with 13 balls to spare at Hove. New ball pair Arnic Sidebottom and Paul Jarvis had made the initial victory thrust with four wickets apiece as Sussex slumped to 105 all out — their lowest first-class score of the season.

Yorkshire recovered from 72 for five to reach their target of 186. England hatsman Martyn Moxon being the main contributor with 61.

Kent still lead the championship with 145 points from Worcestershire (134) - both teams did not play in the current series of games while Leicester-shire's win took them into third spot on 123.

New Sweden-takes yachting lead LULEA, Sweden, June 29, Kookaburra is now overall

(Reuter): Outsider New Sweden notched two dramatic victories yesterday to maintain its undefeated match race record after the second of four semifinal evs as the World -metre Yachting Championship. Skipper Offe Johansson proved master of the almost windless conditions to score a fine tactical victory by nearly 10 minutes over hot favourite Kookahurra III of Australia in millpend-like waters just south of the Arctic Circle.

The 31-year-old local hero then went on to win a tight tacking duel with Australia's Steak 'n' Kidney by a margin of 4:25. A protest from Kookahurra skipper Peter Gilmour about mid-competition course changes to compensate for was turned second place, only one victory behind Johansson, so a successful protest would have void one Swedish victory and levelled the

> with only two-to-three knot winds, resulted in many races being a hattle against the official three-hour cut-off time, and two duels failed to be completed in the maximum allotted time.

Organisers are now considering bringing the rest of the championship's match races into the Lulea harbour basin in order to capitalise on shore breezes. New Sweden started shakily against Kookaburra, and Gilmour's superior tactics allowed the Australian yacht to take a two-and-a-half minute lead after the first beat and spinnaker run. But a lucky 20-degree change in the Baltic breezes provided Johansson with a chance to take a huge 17-minute lead by the fourth mark. The eventual winning margin was 9:56.

Japanese yacht Nippon retired second race of the day, against Crusader '88 of Britain, when a crew member injured his finger. The British yacht then had only the clock to race to gain its second match race victory. Earlier in the day, Crusader had a lucky escape when the three-hour gun stopped its race against Japan's Bengal III with the former Australia III just four yacht lengths from the line. America's Cup holder and master tactician Dennis Conner in his borrowed yacht Nordstjer-nan beat Bengal III hut the race with Denmark's Holger Danske II was timed out.

Karpov moves.

(AP): Former world champion Anatoly Karpov moved into a tie for second place yesterday in the World Cup Chess Championship after winning one adjourned match and drawing a second. Karpov defeated Jan Timman

Sweeping changes for next

PARIS, June 29, (Reuter): Organisers of the controversial Paris-Dakar Rally announced sweeping changes for next December's event today after being fined for irregularities in scason's motoring lası marathon.

Organiser Gilber Sahine told a news conference that the rally would be reduced from 25 days to 15, that trucks would be banned, stages would be cut to a maximum of 18 hours and lower limits on maximum turbo power would be introdeuced.

The number of competitors would also be cut form 600 to 450, he said.

($100,000) by motor sports governing body FISA yesterday for 12 irregularities in last win-fine, saying the offences were minor matters such as non-stan-dard sear belts. "I think we can actually look at this fine as a first step because, from next year, each offence will cost us a million francs ($165,000), which is as much as we pay Algeria for the rights to cross their territory," he Balestre has made no secret of his opposition to the Paris-Dakar Rally, a lengthy cross-desert test a series of faual accidents.

Sahine said FISA had insisted on the changes for the next rally. "If FISA don't take it further, that's all right," he said. "But I think they will try to anaesthetise Paris-Dakar and pick on any minor incident to turn it into a rally like those in the World Championship.

Undisputed world champion's soap opera continues to bubble Time needed to test Tyson's claim to greatness

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., (Reuter): The richest and probably the most hyped fight in history is over and now yet another superlative is being raised about heavyweight champion Mike Tyson - is he the greatest? Can he become the greatest?

Tyson is like a brilliant Formula One race car mechanic stuck in a car body shop banging out dents on a family saloon. He has all the tools to work on the best the world has to offer, but will be ever get a chance to try out his stuff on the very best? "You have to fight a great fighter to be great," Richie Giachetti, the ex-trainer for former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes said on Tuesday in a post mortem on Tyson's astonishing first-round knockout of Michael Spinks yesterday.

It is hard to imagine any of the current contenders giving Tyson a fight the likes of some of the great battles of boxing Joe Louis v Billy Conn. Rocky Marciano - Jersey Joe Walcott, and the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier

As devastating as he has been in rolling to a 35-0 record. Tyson, who is expected to earn about $20 million for last night's one minute, 31-second fight, really has not come close to any of those classic fights. He indeed may attain greatness, as the youngest heavweight champion ever he certainly has a head start, but he cannot do it by himself - he fight Briton Frank Bruno, called hy one American newspaper an 'English muffin.' Bruno, with a 32-2 record is not exactly the stuff of legends.

True, he stopped 31 of his opponents within the distance, but he was stopped by American James "Bonecrusher" Smith, who fearfully ran from and hugged Tyson before losing a points decision last year. American Tim Witherspoon also stopped him.

"Bruno, forget it. That's Mickey Mouse," Giachetti said. "He got knocked out by Bon-ecrusher Smith and Tim Witherspoon. How the hell is he going to give Mike Tyson a fight? They say he's strong and looks good. This isn't a body-building match," said Giachetti, who trained Holmes to two losses against Spinks and one to "If Mike Tyson and Bruno pired to dupe him into signing a contract last February. Tyson accused his late co-manager Jimmy Jacobs of fraudulently inducing bim to sign a contract extension by not telling him of his impending death, Cayton's lawyer, Thomas Puccio, said in a telephone conmanager Bill Cayton at ringside ference call from New York City.

Tyson charged that Cayton and Jacobs rushed him into signing a new contract to protect the Jacobs estate and extend Cayton's hold on the champion. The previous contract was to expire on October 14, 1990.

Puccio said the new contract will run until February 12, 1992. "I'm very disappointed in Mike: I'm just outraged at this law suit," said Cayton. The Tyson suil was brought Wilander was beaten in three straight sets 6-3 6-1 6-3 by ninthseeded Mioslav Mecir of Czechoslozakia in the quarterfinals today.

Connors, however, lost in the fourth round to unseeded Patrick Kuhnen of West Germany. Kuhnen, who is Boris Becker's practice paraner, disposed of Connors by wrapping up their encounter 5-7 7-6 7-6 6-7 6-3. They had resumed at 6-6 in the third set last night after rain and darkness had halted their match on Monday on court two where so many champions have perished in the past.

Kuhnen, however, had only 24 hours to savour the taste of his victory as third-seeded Stefan Edberg put in his place with a 6-3 4-66-17-6 victory in the quarterfinals. Edberg, of Sweden, will now meet Meeir in the semifinals.

Kuhnen did not give up the match without a fight. After winning the second set. Kuhnen lost the third easily but took the fourth into a tie-breaker before Edberg summoned all his experience to take the match.
